

Robert Kalkman Foundation

Golf fun for Children with cancer

The goal of the Robert Kalkman Foundation is to support children with cancer (and/or other physical constraints) in finding relaxation and distraction during their illness. We provide an unforgettable golf experience and a new sports challenge.

Golf is only one of the few sports that these children can still practice. It gives them strength and self-confidence. The social aspect and mental support also play an important role. Therefore, the children are allowed to bring a brother, sister, or good friend. The distraction, the social interaction, golf itself, and a little flavor of competition all have a positive influence to the well-being and recovery of the children. For parents this is a special and impressive experience as well.

Long term ambassadors of the Robert Kalkman Foundation include The Ryder Cup European Development Trust and former professional Dutch soccer player Marco van Basten.
